

Path to Financial Independence

You've decided to take the leap from renter to homeowner but are unsure where to start on your homebuying journey.

While everyone's path is unique, here are some of the most common stops that are sure to be on your path to financial independence.

1 Know your current bank account balance

Did You Know?

Parents and grandparents can open a Missouri First-Time Homebuyer Savings Account for their children or grandchildren and can make contributions to the account as well.

The first step on your path to financial independence is understanding your current financial situation. You should know how much money is in your bank account and how much will be required for a down payment on your ideal home.

2 Understand how much you can borrow

Your debt-to-income ratio is one of the first things a lender will analyze when looking for a mortgage. Additionally, there are key credit considerations that lenders need to take into account, such as overall level of debt and length of credit history.

What Is The Debt-to-Income Ratio?

A ratio calculated by taking your total monthly debt load and dividing it by your monthly gross income.

3 Understand how much you want to spend

Loan approval doesn't necessarily mean you need to spend as much as you can borrow. Keep in mind that while homeownership may come with its own set of expenses, homeowners can expect tax savings from both the mortgage interest deduction and property tax deductions available to Missourians.

4 Understand that financial independence is only one piece of the puzzle

Homeownership enables individuals to accumulate wealth over time and has been shown to positively impact both physical and psychological health.
